M. STANTON EVANS

M. Stanton Evans is the former editor of The Indianapolis News and founding director of the National Journalism Center in Washington, D.C. The Journalism Center is dedicated to teaching young journalists not only the technical skills of their trade, but a deep understanding of the issues they will be covering. More than 1,300 young journalists have trained at the center, and have gone on to jobs at all the major news channels, magazines and newspapers across the country. Evans has been a columnist for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate and a commentator for CBS radio-TV, NPR, and the Voice of America. He is the author of seven books, the latest entitled The Theme is Freedom.

WILLIAM C. DENNIS, Interviewer

William C. Dennis is a Senior Fellow at the Atlas Economic Research Foundation and Adjunct Scholar at the Acton Institute. From 1985 to 2001, he served Liberty Fund, Inc., and its sister organization the Pierre F. and Emil Goodrich Foundation in various capacities, including Program Officer, Director of Publications, and Director of Grants. Dennis was a professor of American History at Denison University from 1968 to 1985. Current professional interests include the importance of liberty in thinking about environmental questions.